Second Woman Dies Of Mushroom Poisoning

Santa Rosa recorded its second fatal mushroom poisoning death Mrs. Forbes yesterday at the Chaplain's service, with the announcement that Rose Forbes, 60, of 518 Riley st., who died Thursday in a pines of West Chapel of the Roses, Santa Rosa hospital, was the victim of mushrooms.

Marin County Coroner Andrew C. Frost ruled yesterday that Mrs. Forbes recently ate some mushrooms picked and prepared by a co-worker at the Foreign Broadcasting Information Service office in Forestville.

Mr. Johansen said Mrs. Forbes then told a friend she was going out and pick some mushrooms because "I know what they look like now." However, she became ill Nov. 24 and was admitted to Earl, picked ate fatal mushrooms near their Porter Creek rd. home.

The coroner said tests indicated Mrs. Forbes apparently picked the wrong type near Forestville rooms.

Valerie R. Fisher, 60, of 2455 Portola

Several other deaths have been recorded in California since early September from wild mushrooms.

County health officers repeated earlier warning about not picking mushrooms unless people know just what they're picking.

Mrs. Fisher and her husband, Carl, picked ate fatal mushrooms near their Porter Creek rd. home.

Mrs. Forbes apparently picked the wrong type near Forestville radio monitoring station.
